Book Synopsis

Example from the book:

As everyone knows, tooth pains are the result of numerous various factors. The discomfort that stems from a toothache is always apparent, generally in the form of throbbing. The pain will typically intensify as time goes by, whenever you eat, lay down, or drink hot/cold liquids. Toothaches are really painful, and it might seem that no matter what you do - it seems to hurt more. In the dental world, toothaches could involve such things as cavities, infections or abscess in the teeth or gums, debris that has been trapped between the teeth and gums, and trauma to the face, teeth, or the jaw. Occasionally, toothaches could result from medical circumstances and have nothing to do with dental. In most cases, if the problem goes without being checked, it could lead to serious trouble and perhaps even turn into a life threatening scenario.

Typically, whenever you have a toothache, you'll experience tremendous pain. The pain will stem from the affected tooth or the jaw, and you'll know it nearly instantly. It's going to start out to be a throbbing pain, then carry on to get worse and worse until you get it treated. If you wait too long and let the infection to spread through the tooth, you'll end up having to get it pulled or cut out.
